Lecturer, Public Relations

Job No: CURTIN635

Location: Bentley, Perth

Continuing, full time

$99,530 - $118,115 (ALB) plus 17% Superannuation

Curtin University is ranked in the top 1% of universities worldwide (ARWU 2018 and QS World University Rankings 2019), and is placed 20th in the world for universities less than 50 years old (QS Top 50 Under 50 2019). Curtin is WA's most preferred university, with highly engaged industry-facing partners. A major global player, with well-integrated campuses in Singapore, Malaysia, Mauritius and Dubai.

School of Marketing

The School of Marketing offers a comprehensive range of industry-relevant courses. In line with global trends, we integrate the teaching areas of advertising, marketing and public relations, as well as tourism and hospitality. We are one of the few marketing schools to offer majors in advertising and public relations as part of a firmly business-focused degree.

The school's research is responsible for not only examining changes in marketing practices, but also for propelling them forward. Our research was ranked at world-class level in both marketing and tourism by the Australian Government in the 2015 Excellence in Research for Australia (ERA) assessment.

Your new role

We are seeking a Public Relations Lecturer, Teaching Focussed, to join the School of Marketing on a continuing basis.

As a Lecturer, you will work as part of a team providing innovation and excellence in teaching within the public relations discipline. You will be responsible for coordinating and delivering undergraduate and postgraduate level units.
