The Erasmus School of Economics offers a strong research culture, ample research resources, and low teaching loads, compared to other international research schools. Located in the heart of the Netherlands, the university provides a pleasant work and living environment with all of the amenities and opportunities of a world-class city, but without much of its typical disadvantages. Therefore, Rotterdam, with its first-rate public healthcare, public schooling system, and affordable housing at the center of Europe (Paris, London, Barcelona, Madrid, Rome are all within 2 hours flying time) is ideal for scholars that aim to focus on research for the next 4-6 years, but at the same time may want to start or raise a family.
