Summary of Position

The Department is seeking a qualified individual to teach a selection of undergraduate courses in marketing including core courses (e.g. Principle of Marketing, Consumer Behavior and Marketing Research), as well as upper level courses that may include (e.g. Retailing, Marketing Data Analysis, Health Care Marketing, Supply Chain, Sales and Sports Marketing). Teaching graduate courses in marketing might also be required. S/he will participate in development and improvement of curriculum and curriculum delivery, assessment of student learning, service work including student engagement activities and committees, and engage in scholarly activities and professional development aligned with current and emergent programmatic needs. Faculty members have professional responsibilities which include advising students, participation in committees, keeping regular posted office hours, and participation in traditional functions which have academic significance. Faculty members may be required to teach off-campus and/or on-line. Relevant work experience as well as college level teaching experience in Marketing or related areas are expected.

Candidates must have the capacity to participate in the development and improvement in curricular offerings and methods, utilizing face to face, online, and blended strategies. Willing/able to redirect teaching and scholarly activities to accommodate changing market needs reflecting application of a continuous quality improvement framework. Ability to work independently and collaboratively with effective communication and listening skills. The regular teaching load is four course sections a semester. Salary commensurate with qualifications plus a comprehensive benefit package.

Faculty members also have professional responsibilities which may include advising students, orientation and registration of students, participation in University committees, keeping regular posted office hours (which are scheduled at times convenient for students), and participation in traditional functions which have academic significance. Faculty members may be required to teach off-campus or in an on-line environment.
