Dear JDM Society,

The Marketing Department at NYU Stern School of Business will be recruiting for one tenure-track assistant professor position. Applicants should possess a high level of potential in research and teaching and have received their PhD or be assured of its completion within one year of the 2020–2021 academic year.

Located in New York City, the Stern Marketing Department is ranked as one of the top departments in the world based on research productivity. Our faculty currently consists of 27 full-time faculty members from all over the world with multiple areas of expertise including advertising, branding, consumer behavior, data analytics, decision-making, machine learning, market research, pricing, new product development, high-tech marketing, international marketing, and digital marketing.

The online, completed application should include a curriculum vitae, three letters of reference, published and working papers, as well as any additional materials relevant to evaluating the candidate's potential and should be received no later than July 19, 2019.

Applicants should apply by submitting the complete package via our online application system, which can be found at <https://apply.interfolio.com/64294>

Candidate interviews will take place at the AMA Summer Educators' Conference in Chicago, August 9–11, 2019.
