Northwestern College

Marketing Faculty Position

Description

MARKETING FACULTY POSITION

Northwestern College (Orange City, Iowa) invites applications for a tenure-track or professor-of-practice faculty position in marketing beginning August 2019.

PhD or DBA in marketing or a closely related field is expected for tenure-track candidates (ABDs will also be considered). Hiring preference will be given to persons with practical business experience, who envision involving students in project-based, active learning and data analysis. Professionals with a master's degree and significant work experience are also encouraged to apply as professor-of-practice track candidates.

The successful candidate will teach introductory marketing courses, as well as advanced courses in the areas of marketing research, retailing and services marketing, and the candidate's field of interest. The normal teaching load is 24 hours per academic year. The department is especially interested in candidates who can work collegially and effectively with others, in addition to carrying out scholarly or professional engagement, student advising, and faculty governance responsibilities.
