Hiring Department

Henry W. Bloch School of Management; Department of Marketing and Supply Chain Management

Job Description

The Henry W. Bloch School of Management at the University of Missouri-Kansas City is seeking applications from outstanding candidates for one or more tenure-track or tenured positions in marketing. Consideration will be given to candidates for assistant, association, or full professor positions. Senior candidates with strong credentials may be eligible for an endowed chair or professorship. Candidates are expected to have outstanding research and teaching credentials. Candidates are required to have a PhD or DBA in business or a related discipline, with a focus on marketing where the business school is accredited by AACSB. Evidence of instructional effectiveness is required, with priority given to candidates demonstrating the ability to utilize both traditional and online modalities and the ability to address the needs of both undergraduate students and experienced professionals and executives. Also required is evidence demonstrating the capability to publish in high-impact journals. For more senior candidates, the candidate must have an established and active research program with a significant portfolio of publications in top-tier outlets. We offer a competitive compensation and benefits package and strong research support. Across the school, we anticipate significant faculty hiring and opportunities to enhance our environment for research, teaching and community engagement. Significant support from the Bloch Family Foundation, established by our School's namesake, Henry W. Bloch, encourages excellence in research, teaching, and
